

Troy Coughlin gave Vinny Budano about all the fuss he could take in 2006. Although the storied driver from Columbus, Ohio went winless in '06, Coughlin was always a contender in his Sonny Leonard built, naturally aspirated 2004 Cavalier. Coughlin started out the season with a redlight in the second round in Florida, and followed with the same foul in Kentucky. In Ohio at the third stop on the tour, Coughlin advanced to the finals, but mechanical troubles kept him from a shot at the win. In Joilet, he qualified well and also advanced to the semis, in one of the toughest fields in the history of the sport. With his driving now in sync, and the car running well, Coughlin would make it to the remaining three finals to face Budano, but despite his and the Jeg's team's greatest effort, couldn't top the speedster from New York.
